

Spanish optical cable acquisition

Overview

In December 2024, Italy's Tratos Cavi S. completed its acquisition of Spain's TELNET Fibre Optic S., marking a significant milestone in both companies' histories. This acquisition brought together two innovative players in the telecommunications and cable manufacturing industries, combining TELNET's expertise in fibre optic. Nexans has completed the acquisition of Cables RCT, a Spanish cable company specializing in low-voltage cables and fire-resistant solutions for buildings. A press release and media reports outlined how the strategic move was expected to significantly boost Tratos' position in the fiber optic. Optical fiber has established itself as the backbone of connectivity in Spain, with millions of homes and businesses rely on this infrastructure daily to work, study, entertain, and provide critical services. At the same time, the sector is experiencing a period of intense activity with.
